    Em                                Am
The grass was as green as it always was that sinister day
    Em                                            Am
Em
The blackbirds sang their songs as they always did that black-letter day
                    Am                      Em
We passed the great gate for the very last time
               Am
I did not look back, I knew we'd stay

Em                                Em                Em      G
I knew they they would not let us go leave the death strip
Em                                                Em
I saw the gleam in their eyes of fear and enslavement
                            Em    Em  C
Suffering from the crushing weight

[Ponte]

D         C      D        B B B B B

[Refrão]

Proclaim our barren sacrifice

Em                          Em
On that ground we cherished life
            Em    G
We embraced death
       Em                       Em
As the children's cries trailed off
Sob yielded deathly hush

    Em                              Am
The grass was as green as it always was that sinister day
   Em                                        Am
As we walked the alleys like thousand times before
I knew we'd stay
