Aerosmith - Big Ten-inch Record

You'll have to work out the timing on your own because all I did was put two
           "Big Ten-Inch Record" Guitar parts performed by Joe Perry and Brad Whitford spaces in between notes. Anyway, here it is:
   "I was listening to a tape of given me by an old friend of solo(guitar 1)- ours called Zonk, and I heard this song, which is originally from like 1936.
The big rumor is that I say, 'Suck on my big 10 inch' on the record. I don't. I'm saying 'cept'-as in except-not 'suck.' But no one in the whole world believes me."

                                                                The chord progression for the rest of the song is the same.
      D7
              Α7
                     E7
                            Bm
                                                                The rest of the lyrics go like this:
                                                                   Last night I tried to tease her
                                                                   I gave my love a little pinch Got me the strangest woman
                                                                   But she said "Now stop that jivin' Believe me this chick's no cinch now whip out your big ten-inch
   But I really get her goin'
                                                                   (chorus)
  When I get out my big ten-inch I'll cover her with kisses and when we're in a lover's clinch record of a band that plays the blues she gets all excited but then she puts on my big ten-inch well a band that plays the blues (chorus)
                  F7
   She just loves my big ten-inch My gal don't go for smokin'
                                                                   and liquor just makes her flinch record of her favorite blues Seems she don't go for nothin'
                                                                   'cept for my big ten-inch This is what I came up with for the solo. It seems pretty accurate (chorus)
but I'm still a bit cautious because it's the first time that symbols used in transcription: I figured out a somewhat difficult solo. This is the solo on the album, by p = pull-off the way. I'm h = hammer-on aware that their live versions(Unplugged, etc.) are a bit different in that b = bend
they contain solos by Joe, Brad and Tom Ghimbel(saxophone)but r = release
this is the = barely audible
Toys in the Attic version and therefore, this is the only /// = slide down to first fret
