Hey Mom, Dead Mom
                                                               And I'm your clone
I need a little help here
                                                               Your strange creation
                                                                         Fm
I'm prob'ly talking to myself here
                                                               You held my hand
But Dead Mom I gotta ask
                                                              And life came easy

                                                               Now jokes don't land
Are you really in the ground?
Cause I feel you all around me
                                                               And no one sees me
Are you here, dead Mom?
                                                               Nothing seems to fit

Dead Mom
                                                              Mamma, is this it?
                                                               Are you receiving?
Dead Mom
                                                               I want something to believe in

I'm tired of trying to iron out my creases
                                                               Or I'm done
I'm a bunch of broken pieces
                                                               Take me where my soul can run
     G
It was you who made me whole
                                                               Or I'll be in my bedroom
Every day dad's staring at me
                                                               Wake me when I'm twenty one
       Gbm
Like all hurry up get happy
                                                               Daddy's moving forward
Move along
                                                               Daddy didn't lose a mom
Forget about your mom
                                                              Mamma won't you send a sign?
Cause daddy's in denial
                                                               I'm running out of hope and time
Daddy doesn't wanna feel
                                                               A plague of mice, a lightning strike
He wants me to smile
                                                               Or drop a nuclear bomb
And clap like a performing seal
                                                               No more playing daddy's game
Ignored it for a while
                                                                Fm Eb
                                                                               Ab
                                                               I'll go insane if things don't change
But Daddy's lost his mind for real
                                                                         Db
You won't believe the mess that we've become Whatever it takes to make him say your name
