

Birdy - Unbroken

```
Tom: Gb
                                                              Sometimes the tears we cry
Could you keep your head up when you're losing ground?
                                                              Are more than any heart can take
Could you keep your head up, ooh ooh
                                                              We hurt, just keep it inside
               Gb
                                                                   Ebm
Everything you once loved like your own blood comes crumbling
                                                              Small wonder that it starts to break
                                                              Many moons will light up the way
Could you keep your head up, ooh ooh
                                                                 Gb
                                                              As sure as night will follow day
Sometimes the tears we cry
                                                              And everything you once loved Remains
Are more than any heart can take
                                                                Bbm B
                                                                            Bbm B
                                                              unbroken, unbroken
We hurt, just keep it inside
                                                              Ahm
Small wonder that it starts to break
                                                              Sometimes the tears we cry
                                                              Are more than any heart can take
Many moons will light up the way
                                                                          В
                                                              We hurt, just keep it inside
As sure as night will follow day
                                                              Small wonder that it starts to break
And everything you once loved Remains
   Bbm B
                                                              Everything you once loved lies unbroken
unbroken, unbroken
                                                              Many moons will light us
Many moons will light up the way
                                                              Many moons will guide us
   Gb
As sure as night will follow day
                                                              Everything you once loved lies unbroken
And everything you once loved Remains
                                                              Leave the past behind us
   Bbm B
               Bbm B
unbroken, unbroken
                                                              Leave the past behind us
Could you find a daydream in the dead of night?
                                                              Many moons will light up the way
                                                                  Gb
Could you find a daydream, ooh ooh
                                                              As sure as night will follow day
             Gb
Keep the quiet victory to a whisper in an uphill fight
                                                              And everything you once loved Remains
                                                                 Bbm B
                                                                             Bbm B
Could you keep your head up, ooh ooh
                                                              Unbroken, unbroken
```

Acordes

