

Blink 182 - She Likes Me For Me

Tom: C
                                                                 (chorus 2)
        (riff 1)
                                (riff 2)
                                                          (riff She likes me for me!
                                                                 Not because i hang with leonardo
                                                                 Or that guy who played in ?fargo?
                                                                 I think his name is steve
(verse 1)
                                                                 She?s the one for me
                                                                 And i just can?t live without her
                                                                 My arms belong around her
She don?t care about my car.
                                                                 And i?m so glad i found her once again.
She don?t care about my money. (riff 2)
                                                                 (bridge)
And that?s real good because i don?t got alot to spend, (riff
                                                                 And i?m so glad i found her once again.
                                                                 And i?m so glad i found her once again.
But if i did it wouldn?t mean nothin?.
(chorus)
                                                                 Gazing at the ceiling
                                                                 As we entertain our feelings in the dark
She likes me for me
                                                                 The things that we?re afraid of are gonna show us
Not because i look like tyson beckford
                                                                 What we?re made of in the end.
With the charm of robert redford
                                                                 (chorus 3)
Oozing out my ears
                                                                 She likes me for me
                                                                 Not because i sing like pavarotti
But what she sees
                                                                 Or because i am such a hottie (sigh)
                                                                 I like her for her
Are my faults and indecisions
                                                                 Not because she?s phat like cindy crawford
                                                                 She has got so much to offer
My insecure conditions
                                                                 Why does she waste all her time with me
                                                                 There must be something there that i don?t see
And the tears upon the pillow that i shed
                                                                 (chorus 4)
(verse 2)
                                                                 She likes me for me
                                                                 Not because i?m tough like dirty harry
She don?t care about my big screen
                                                                 Make her laugh just like jim carrey
                                                                 Unlike ?the cable guy"
Or my collection of dvd?s
Things like that just never mattered much to her
                                                                 But what she sees
Plus she don?t watch to much tv.
                                                                 Is that i can?t live without her
                                                                 My arms belong around her
And she don?t care that i can fly her To places she ain?t never been
                                                                 And i?m so glad i found her once again
But if she really wants to go
                                                                 (outro)
I think deep down she knows that
                                                                 Found her once again
All she has to say is when...
