

Ethan Bortnick - sunshowers

tom:
 Sunshowers filled our afternoons
 When you moved back home in early June
 Clear water piercing through the light
 You're gently weeping through the night
 So shed your skin, just like a snake
 You were raised to keep your mind at bay
 You turn the corner to an empty house
 'Cause for a moment
 You forgot that everyone's moved out
 I have seen you die
 I have seen you grow new limbs
 I have seen you cry
 I have seen the life it brings
 Sunshowers weren't a common thing
 When we first met in early Spring
 Clear water drifting off with time
 You were weeping like every night
 And now we're here in a college dorm
 Living with roommates to redefine the norm

Dad moved away and mom's alone
 And for a moment
 You don't have a family anymore
 I have seen you die
 I have seen you grow new limbs
 I have seen you cry
 I have seen the life it brings
 Ba, da, da, da, duh, da, duh
 Ba, da, da, da, duh, da, duh, dum
 Mm, mm, mm
 And now we're here in a college dorm
 Living with roommates to redefine the norm (ah)
 Dad moved away and Mom's alone
 And for a moment
 You don't have a family anymore
 I have seen you die
 I have seen you grow new limbs
 I have seen you cry
 I have seen the life it brings
