

Jack Johnson - Posters

Intro: part 1

Intro: part 2 repeat x2

Also, instead of playing these two strings, you can slide a chords down the neck. It ends up as Hammer on a Db on the 9th fret.

E bar chord on the 7th, Eb on the 6th, Db on the 6th, and a B

Depends on what type of sound you want, I've(Reed) second. seen Jack do this one live, but he does the other one as well

Looking at himself but wishing he was someone else Because the posters on the wall they don't look alike him at So he ties it up he puts it in, he pulls it back and gives a

Laughing at himself because he knows he ain't loved at all

Refrão

He gets his courage from the can, It makes him feel like a man Because he's loving all the ladies But the ladies don't love him at all

Refrão

Cause when he's not drunk He's only stuck on himself And then he has the nerve

To say he needs a decent girl

Looking at herself but wishing she was someone else Because the body of the dolly don't a-look like hers at all So she straps it on, she sucks it in, she throws it up but gives a grin

Laughing at herself because she knows she ain't that at all

Caught up in the trends You know the truth began to bend And the next thing you man There just ain't no truth left at all

Cause when the pretty girl walks She walks so proud And when the pretty girl laughs Oh man, she laughs so loud

Ponte

And if it ain't this then its that As a matter of fact She hasn't had a day to relax Since she has lost her ability to think clearly Intro: part 2

Verso

Well I'm an energetic apathetic version of another person Check out my outsides there ain't nothing in here

Well I'm a superficial systematic music, television addict Check out my outsides there ain't nothing in

Here comes another one, just like the other

Looking at himself but wishing he was someone else

Because the posters on the wall they don't a look alike a him He ties it up he puts it in, he pulls it back and gives a grin Laughing at himself because he knows he ain't loved at all He knows he ain't loved at all
