

James Blunt - Sugar Coated

```
Tom: C
                                                                 Verse 2
  The key is pretty strange-it goes from the key of {\color{red} G} in the Hello dawn. It's good to be.
verse to Eb in the Chorus
                                                                 Did I pay for the girl lying next to me?
Intro: G Bm G Bm
Verse 1
                                                                 I had a love, but little luck.
                                                                 I don't bleed any more 'cause my heart's been crushed.
I'm on a bus. I'm in a rush.
                                                                 And now I'm free - lucky me.
I would catch a cab, but I'm not that fussed.
                                                                 Yeah my girlfriend was a bore, she don't love me anymore.
Another day. Another dime.
I know some might say, that I'm wasting time.
                                                                 Chorus
And then at night, another fight,
                                                                 Solo=Chorus Chords
And I don't know what it means but I'd never cause a scene.
         Bb
I'm gonna make today sugar-coated.
                                                                 Verse 3
         Bb
                          Eb
                                Dm
I'm gonna get so high I'm lying here on the floor.
                                                                 A little hush. A little rush.
                Bb
It's time these shoes of mine were fully loaded.
                                                                 I guess now we'll see, if I'm big enough.
                         Fb
It's time to sit back and smile.
                                                                 Finally it's only me.
I've had a smoke and it's been a while.
                                                                 Things will never be the same. There's no living life again.
It's been a while.
                                                                 Chorus
```

Acordes

