

John Denver - I Guess He'd Rather Be In Colorado

Tom: G

D
I guess he'd rather be in Colorado
he'd rather spend his time out where the G D C
sky looks like a pearl after a rain
G D
once again I see him walking once again I hear him talking Em C G
to the stars he makes and asking them for busfare

I guess he'd rather be in Colorado he'd rather play his banjo in the morning when the moon is scarcely gone in the dawn the subway's coming in the dawn I hear him humming some old song he wrote of love in Boulder Canyon

I guess he'd rather be in Colorado
I guess he'd rather work out where the only thing you earn is what you spend in the end up in his office in the end a quiet cough is all he has to show he lives in New York City
