You colour me in gold

Lips like petals on my throat

The books you read help you explore

The world that you believed in once before

Kiss the freckles on my nose

Em7 D7M

Bb7 C7M

With those blood red pomegranate lips taking sips, hand on hip

Your face could launch a thousand ships

But winter comes and brings the snow

You change your job, you change your home

Still reading books about the ghost of a world you can't be living anymore

And after all, you've been nothing but good to me

And the only way that I can pay you back

Is to daily seek those distant memories

While I'm standing next to you

So when spring time comes and blossoms grow

Come take my hand, can we expose

The hideaways, the hidden doors, the stories we believed in

(Oh, oh) the land that we both dreamed in

Once before (oh)
