I still freeze when I look at these
 Faded photographs from February
 Last twenty second or twenty third
 Shared some dumplings, whispered some words
 We had two, maybe three bucks saved between us
 Sat in blankets on the floor
 Used to wish for money in rain
 A west side apartment, paper plane
 Oh, oh
 Then you left in May
 Took the wrong long way back home
 Wish I'd known that I had all I could want

In our tiny apartment above the Chinese restaurant
 Street sounds blistered with neon lights
 Heard the neighbors snoring every other night
 Eating dumplings from next door
 Finish 'em up, they'd give us some more
 Didn't realize we had it all
 Even when the roof came caving in that fall
 I loved you more than you know
 Covered in flakes of crystal white snow
 Oh, oh
 Then you left in May
 Took the wrong long way back home
 Wish I'd known that I had all I could want
 In our tiny apartment above the Chinese restaurant
