

Morgan Wallen - 7 Summers

Chorus 2
                tom:
                                                                But I wonder when you're drinkin'
  Yeah, you used to talk about
                                                                If you find yourself thinkin'
Gettin' even further south
                                                                About that boy from East Tennessee
  Somewhere where the summer lasted
                                                                And I know we both knew better
All year 'round
                                                                But we still said forever
                                                                     C
Probably got a big ol' diamond
                                                                And that was seven summers of Coke
On your hand right now
                                                                And Southern Comfort
Maybe a baby or a couple by now
                                                                Were we dumb or just younger?
Long driveway to a big white house
                                                                Who knows?
                                                                Back then you used to love the river
But I wonder when you're drinkin'
                                                                And sippin' on a sixer with me
If you find yourself thinkin'
                                                                Does it ever make you sad to know
About that boy from East Tennessee
And I know we both knew better
                                                                That was seven summers ago?
But we still said forever
                                                                [Solo 1]
And that was seven summers of Coke
                                                                 Seven summers ago
And Southern Comfort
                                                                Seven summers ago
Were we dumb or just younger?
                                                                Chorus 3
                                                                           Dm
     G
                                                                Yeah, I wonder when you're drinkin'
Who knows?
Back then you used to love the river
                                                                If you find yourself thinkin'
                                                                About that boy from East Tennessee
And sippin' on a sixer with me
                                                                And I know we both knew better
Does it ever make you sad to know
                                                                    G
                                                                But we still said forever
That was seven summers ago?
                                                                And that was seven summers of Coke
                                                                And Southern Comfort

                                                                Were we dumb or just younger?
                                                                    G
                                                                Who knows?
 Yeah, I bet your daddy's so proud
                                                                Back then you used to love the river
Of how his little girl turned out
 Thinks she dodged a bullet
                                                                And sippin' on a sixer with me
Of a good old boy like me
                                                                Does it ever make you sad to know
'Cause I still
  Go drinkin', same friends on Friday
                                                                That was seven summers ago?
Bought a few acres
Couple roads off the highway
                                                                Outro 1
                                                                 Seven summers ago
Guess you never saw things my way, anyway
                                                                Seven summers ago
