                                                                   I've been tryin' to find my way back home
playing 2
completely different parts. Below are the tabbed parts for But I don't believe in magic guitar 2, with the chords played by guitar 1 listed above the tabbed part.]
                                                                   Life is automatic Intro: ---- (pick "A" like guitar 2
                                                                       B7
                                                                   in verse)
                                                                   But I don't don't mind being on my own
[NOTE: The intro minus the part before the exclamation points
                                                                              D
                                                                     B7
                                                                                                               Α
                                                                   No I don't mind being on my own above is what guitars 1 & 2 play during all the verses of the song.
                                                                   Tab for high pitched guitar in background of chorus:
Listed below
over the lyrics will be only the chords played by guitar 1, You'l hear this little riff repeating again and again in the chorus
but the part played by guitar 2 is also being played in the song.]
                                                                   background with some sort of weird guitar effect used on it:
[ANOTHER NOTE: After guitar 1 has played each chord
progression above
(\mbox{Gbm} A \mbox{E} D A ), this is how the second "A" in the chord
