

Pierce The Veil - 12 Fractures (feat. Chloe Moriondo)

```
tom:
               G
        [Primeira Parte]
                                                               Now I miss that pain sometimes
                                                               In this so-called life
 Tell me if I were to smile now
                                                               There were shortcuts into heaven through your eyes
 In the dead of the dark, would it even exist
                                                               [Ponte]
Or is it hard to tell you treat me like a cheap motel
                                                               Da-da-da-da-da-da
But nevertheless I was prepared to die
                                                               Da-da-da-da-da-da
For that thing in your chest, fuck your money
                                                               Da-da-da-da-da-da
I fantasize about those nights you held me down
                                                               [Refrão]
And sewed your lips to mine
[Refrão]
                                                               Now I
                                                               Now I miss that pain sometimes
Now I miss that pain sometimes
                                                               In this so-called life
In this so-called life
                                                               There were shortcuts into heaven through your eyes
There were shortcuts into heaven through your eyes
                                                               [Final]
[Segunda Parte]
                                                                 Am I the taste that you watered down?
 We emptied our wrists on the dotted line
                                                                 Or am I the dust in your candy?
 Now I stay on my side of the city
                                                               You wash me off then spit me out
A refugee, no MTV
                                                               Once I lost the taste inside your mouth
Oh well thank God for THC
Acordes
                                      ukulele-chords.com
```

[Refrão]