                                                                   He will play God
You were cracking all your fingers
With your eyes fixed to the floor
                                                                No matter who you are or where you've been Sound had echoed down the street
                                                                He is watching from a screen
By the monument you hear
                                                                Keeps a keen eye on the in-between
Man is screaming through a megaphone
                                                                From the people to the Queen
"Get your hands off the Middle East"
Every word would herd the cynical
                                                                   He will play God
Every word would cut your teeth
                                                                      Em

It's all the same down in the capital
All the suits and clattered feet

Sewer rats will shower the underground

In a race to make ends meet
