Silverchair - Surfin' Bird

Tom: A

    Guitar and Bass Tab
Standard tuning.

Surfin' Bird is a cover of the Trashmen and the Cramps, recorded in less than two hours in Sydney, New South Wales, Australia during late January 1996. It appears on MOM, a compilation which is a benefit for the Surfrider Foundation. Very basic song with three chords. I think the bass follows the guitar except in the second riff.

the first riff played eight times is:
        E         B    E      B

                                        X8

      "Everybody's heard a-bout the bird ..."

the following riff isn't the same for guitar and bass:

                B                            A

   "Don't you know about the bird,  everybody's heard about the bird."

The third is the same as the first one, played twice, then a E chord that Daniel slides down.
        E         B    E      B               E
Order: Repeat four times these three riffs one after another, with a pause of four beats between the first and second times for drums, then a pause of four beats between the second and third times for singing, and finally a pause
of eight beats between the third and fourth times for drums.
