

S.O.J.A. (Soldiers of Jah Army) - Waking Up

Tom: G
                                                                  this world, cuz we're the ones
  G
                                                                  all the tools and all the scars
I'm Just now waking up
                                                                  But all we do is increase the
to what life is facing us load, cuz we're the ones with and to what we've all become all the guns and all the cars
I'm Just now waking up
                                                                  And we've got our shoes to fill, and
Some people call your name
                                                                  we want until we drop
but it's not the same
                                                                  Cuz this race can't be
I'm just now waking up
                                                                  endured if we don't know where to stop
I'm Just now waking up
                                                                  to what life is facing us
I'm Just now waking up
                                                                  I'm Just now waking up
but it's not the same
I'm just now waking up
We think we know good
                                                                  I'm just now waking up
we think we know the bad
                                                                  Solo:
we think we know just what this world is spinning for We think we move up while we're stepping back Increasing till this world
                                                                  We're visiting here, we're \underline{\underline{j}}\,ust it just can't take no more passing here, can't settle down And I've got myself to blame, my we're like the wind here, yeah we acid rain is my tears blow in here and we blow out My church is blue and green, from But I've got myself to blame space, I mean, its clear and I won't be here for too long
                                                                  But I'll leave my footprints here
                                                                  before we're all gone
We're supposed to watch over
