Bm A G
I guess you really did it this time
                                                                Who you are is not what you've been
Left yourself in your war path
                                                                You're still an innocent
Bm A G
                                                                It's OK, life is a tough crowd
Lost your balance on a tightrope
                                                                32 and still growing up now
Lost your mind trying to get it back
                                                               Who you are is not what you did
Wasn't it easier in your lunch box days?
                                                                You're still an innocent
Always a bigger bed to crawl into
                                                                Time turns flames to ambers
Wasn't it beautiful when you believed in everything
And everybody believed in you?
                                                                You'll have new Septembers
                                                                Everyone of us has messed up too
It's all right, just wait and see
                                                                Minds change like the weather
You're streaming lights are still bright to me oh
                                                                I hope you remember today is never too late
Who you are is not what you've been
                                                                              Bm A G
                                            Bm A
                                                                To be brave (ohh)
You're still an innocent
You're still an innocent
                                                                It's all right, just wait and see
                                                                You're streaming lights are still bright to me oh
There's some things you can't speak of
                                                               Who you are is not what you've been
But tonight you'll leave it all again
                                                                You're still an innocent
You wouldn't be shattered on the floor now
                                                                It's OK, life is a tough crowd
If only you would sing only what you know now then
                                                                32 and still growing up now
Wasn't it easy you're in your fireflies catching days?
                                                               Who you are is not what you did
And everything out of reach something bigger brought down to
                                                               You're still an innocent
                                                                Bm A G
Wasn't it beautiful running wild till you fell asleep
                                                                Lost your balance on a tightrope
                                                                Bm A G
                                                               Lost your mind trying to get it back
```

Before the monsters caught up to you?
