

Third Eye Blind - Palm Reader

Tom: A

tabbed by: Kevin Brosky (3EBdude)

I was doing some figuring out with this one because I wanted to learn it so badly pretty close to them. I watched Tony and it helped me figure some things out for the song when I got home. So this is what I have for it.

The tuning is EADGBD and that is for sure because Tony Fredianelli said so on his site. It's almost standard except the high E gets tuned down a whole step (although you could probably play it in standard and it wouldn't sound too much different).
Intro:

The hardest thing to get the hang of is that you almost have to be playing two parts at once, combined into one part. The way I do it is my first finger plays all the single notes and my second and third fingers do all the harmonics. That pattern continues for the verses.

Interlude:

These bends are half bends

Chorus:

A

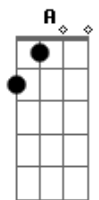

G

D

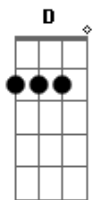

Then there is that distorted bridge thing and that goes like this:

So that is the basis of the song from what I have gathered. There are maybe some other little fills at certain parts but this is the main gist of it all. It should be pretty accurate. I hope this helps and maybe some other people will have more on this song eventually. Enjoy!

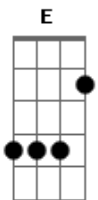

Acordes

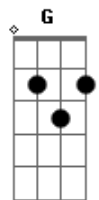

© ukulele-chords.com

© ukulele-chords.com

© ukulele-chords.com

© ukulele-chords.com